Walking between Sainte-Marie and the Wye Marsh? See if you can spot these 6 Canadian icons in the forest!

1. This orange-toothed, flat-tailed, furry Canadian icon fueled Europe's interest in the Great White North.

2. Famous for its bright red feathers and black mask, this monogamous songbird was named after red-cloaked officials of the Catholic Church.

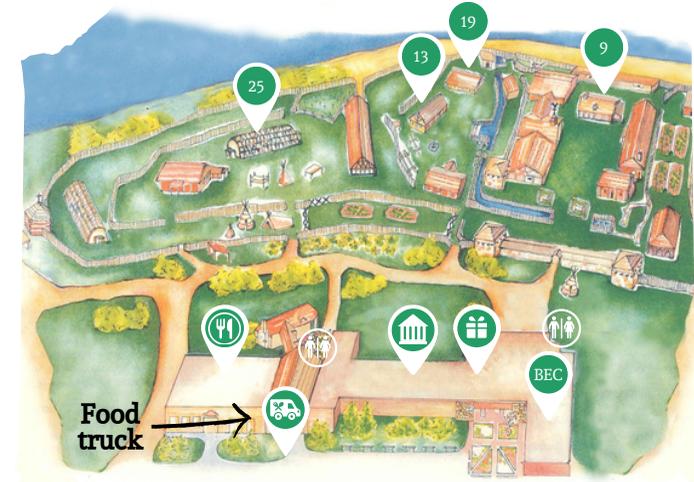

3. Inspired by a hare's foot, this First Nation innovation can help us walk on snow.

4. This fascinating reptile can "walk" under water, and is central to the Wendat story of creation.

5. Samuel de Champlain admired this First Nation vessel for its speed and elegance.

6. Native to this land at the time of Sainte-Marie, this feathered giant was later hunted out by early settlers. Friends of Wye Marsh helped reintroduce it to Ontario after a 200-year absence.
